Between May 17 and May 19, I attended a Wilson Learning seminar in Piscataway, NJ on creating a high performance team. The course instructor, Mr. Rod Waddell, was apparently contracted by you to teach the course. This is strictly a personal opinion of course, but I do not believe that the evaluation forms given out at the end of the seminar could possibly reflect how exceptionally well Rod performed his assignment.

I am a team leader and our entire team was assembled for this seminar. Without exception, team members were disgruntled to say the least about having to go to the seminar in the first place. Imposing deadlines and pressures were only exacerbated by the thought of spending three days away from the project. Rod overcame the negative attitude that initially prevailed and left the team with a feeling that those three days were rewarding and will benefit us as individuals and the project effort in the long run.

*Rod, After attending your MFE in St. Louis, I know your skills to be superb.
This is just one more testimony to what you represent. Thanks
which a high quality
